The St. Josephs-Blatt 1896-1919 (American University Studies) was a German-language newspaper published by the German-American Catholic population. It was a barometer of the ideals, thoughts, and fears of this population. The newspaper was important in understanding the historical context and the ideals of the German-American Catholic community.